

About Uplands Reserve

Originally known as “Uplands” due to its hilly terrain, this farm was purchased by George Large (1879-1958) and his wife Frances in 1931. Large was a Hunterdon County judge, and in 1934, he was appointed Special Assistant Attorney General for the upcoming Flemington trial of the kidnapping and murder of Colonel Charles Lindbergh’s infant son. His assignment for the prosecution team was to obtain depositions and question witnesses for the case. To avoid the press, the Lindberghs were shuttled to several different locations, including Uplands. It was here where Charles Lindbergh spent a somber 33rd birthday. A week later, on February 13, 1935, the jury found Bruno Richard Hauptmann guilty of murder. Afterwards, Judge Large continued with his law firm until his death. The property changed ownership until 1986 when the county acquired 101 acres for open space. Foundations of some structures remain.

Recreational Opportunities

Uplands offers a moderate 1.1 mile loop trail adjacent to the Bernadette Morales Trail System. The trail meanders through a mixture of hardwood forest, fields in natural succession, hedgerows, and thickets. The trail was constructed for an Eagle Scout project. To access the Uplands Trail, take the Main Trail from the Bernadette Morales parking area to the junction of the Eagle Trail. The Eagle Trail turns into the Uplands Trail. This stretch adds 1.6 miles for a round-trip hike.

Succession at Uplands

Uplands provides a unique look at succession. Since its time as an estate, different areas have been reclaimed by nature. Along the trail, evergreens are still present in the canopy. These evergreens have been enclosed by hardwoods and will eventually die out. Also, observe the young growth that is occurring throughout the park. While most of the hardwood canopy consists of oak trees, the new growth consists mostly of young maple trees. This is due to wildlife like White-tailed Deer, Eastern Gray Squirrels, and Wild Turkey foraging on acorns. This consumption of acorns is preventing the re-growth of oak trees. Eventually these young maple trees will grow and dominate the canopy.
