

National Public Safety Telecommunicators Week April 8-14, 2018

During the week of April 8 – 14, 2018, emergency communications centers around the country will be celebrating their public safety telecommunicators in a variety of ways. One of the simplest and easiest ways to celebrate these professionals is through recognition of what they do every day, which is answer calls from our citizens during times of distress and emergency situations that are sometimes unimaginable. These professionals do this with grace and compassion.

Not only do they perform this job, which may involve providing pre-arrival instructions to assist in the rendering of medical aid, they also provide support as a voice on the radio or behind a computer screen, to the thousands of men and women, who serve as our communities' first responders, as they provide law enforcement, emergency medical services and fire protection services across this nation.

Our public safety telecommunicators have remained vigilant and steadfast in their duties to assist those when they call for help. All of these public safety telecommunicators deserve recognition for what they do, not only in times of major emergencies, but what they do every day when they report to duty

Please take time during this week to recognize and celebrate Telecommunicators across the country and especially to those that serve all of our citizens in Hunterdon County. We are all very thankful for what you do.
